Kona Ute, $799

Gas-guzzlers aren't the only way to schlep stuff around town: The Ute (green in both color and philosophy) has a long back rack for big cargo, plus two side bags (included) store smaller accessories. www.konaworld.com.

STRiDA 5.0 Bicycle, $800

This sculpture-cum-bicycle, with its greaseless rubber chain and folding design, was designed with urbanites in mind. www.momastore.org.

FOR EVERYTHING ELSE

Puma Glow Rider, $1,600

Part of Puma's Urban Mobility Collection, this bike (also available in green) features paint that collects light during the day and glows at night. www.puma.com.

Ellsworth Witness, $3,195 (frame only)

Get all lovey-dovey on this bicycle built for two, then take it off-roading in the backcountry — don't worry, its power-stabilizing, proprietary rear suspension and handmade frame can take it. www.ellsworthbikes.com.

Biomega AMS, $1,450

Denmark designer Biomega used Apple's sleek, dependable and maintenance-free products as muses for this commuter bike, so naturally, you can buy it at modernism mecca Design Within Reach. www.dwr.com.

RE-TIREMENT

The days of jazzing up your bike with a horn, wicker basket or Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle holographic reflectors are long gone (well, maybe a horn is still cool). Instead, express yourself with SweetskinZ bike tires, available in 13 designs from about $40 each.
