Super Downhill racing action burst into the Winter Park Mountain Bike Series in full force on Sunday, with 170 racers ready to try out the inaugural event.

At 5.5 miles in length through a vertical drop of 1,620 feet, the course ran long and tough, testing both endurance and descending skill. Nicolas Enjalbert (Velox/Ellsworth) set the pace on the new course, taking the win in 18 minutes, 32 seconds. The battle for second place was tight, with Jesse Swift (Bikeparts.com/Peak Cycles) in 18:46 edging out teammate Tate Graves by less than a second. Spencer Powlison (Mafia Racing) was fourth in 18:59 and Douglas Schuler (Lenz Sport/BCS/Notubes.com) finished fifth in 19:04.

Full race results are available at www.epicsingletrack.com. The series continues with a cross-country race as part of Crankworx Colorado on August
